LETTER OF TRANSMITTAL.

U. S. DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE,
BUREAU OF STATISTICS,
Washington, D. C., January 9, 1906.

SIR: I have the honor to offer for publication the manuscript of a bulletin prepared under the direction of George K. Holmès, Chief of the Division of Foreign Markets, concerning the imports of meat animals and packing-house products into eleven principal countries, all in Europe except Cuba. The information has been obtained from the published official records of the countries mentioned and indicates the quantities and values of the imported commodities under such classifications as are adopted respectively by the various countries. The principal countries from which the imports are derived are indicated in the tables, and the course of trade is indicated as far back as 1895.

This mass of detailed information discloses the foreign-trade situation with regard to meat animals and packing-house products in these eleven countries as has never been done before, and should be particularly useful to all exporters of these animals and their products in this country.

It is recommended that this matter may be speedily published as Bulletin No. 40 of this Bureau.

Respectfully,

W. M. HAYS,
Assistant Secretary, in Charge

HON. JAMES WILSON,

MEAT PROBLEMS.

EUROPE'S NEED OF EXTERNAL SUPPLY.

Europe consumes more meat than it produces. In some regions where pasture lands are relatively abundant, as in Russia, the poverty of the cattle raisers hinders the production of meat on a large scale; while in some countries of western Europe intensive agriculture makes land too valuable to be used for large stock farms. But in spite of these adverse conditions there is a large production of meat in Europe. By making an excellent quality of lean bacon, as an adjunct to butter making, Denmark is able to excel all competitors in the British market. Ireland also furnishes England with an excellent quality of this meat, and besides ships large numbers of cattle, sheep, and swine across the Irish Sea.

These supplies and others from most if not all the other countries of Europe meet the needs of great numbers of people, but the large population, especially in central and western Europe, calls for still greater supplies and demands them at prices fairly low. To meet this demand it is necessary to import meat from countries where the conditions of production are more favorable.

MARKETS, FREE AND RESTRICTED.

Imported meat finds a better market in the United Kingdom than in any other European country. Certain live animals are forbidden to be brought from foreign countries, as cattle from Argentina and swine from the United States, but the importation of meat is encouraged. During the year 1904 the United Kingdom imported 600,000,000 pounds of bacon, 500,000,000 pounds of fresh beef, and 400,000,000 pounds of fresh mutton. The large consignments of this foreign meat obtain lower freight rates on the British railroads than are said to be given to smaller shipments of the home product. Whole trains loaded only with foreign meat are dispatched regularly from one part of the country to another, notably from Southampton docks to London. The prices of this meat are lower than the domestic product, but the latter is regarded as of better quality—a reputation which may be due partly to the patriotism of the consumers.

Most of the countries on the continent of Europe levy import duties upon meat animals and packing-house products, and some countries further restrict the trade by enforcing systems of inspection which operate to hinder and, in some cases, even prohibit the importation of certain articles. A noteworthy example of such restrictions is afforded by the tariff and the inspection system of Germany, one of the purposes of which is said to be the promotion of German agriculture. There are some products which these regulations do not affect very much: exports of United States lard to Germany almost equal the exports to the United Kingdom, and there are large exports of oleomargarin and sausage casings.

CONDITIONS OF MEAT PRODUCTION.

A region of surplus meat production should be situated in a temperate climate, a sufficient area of cheap pasture land may be an advantage, and the meat producers should be financially able to give the proper attention to the making of good meat and to its transportation to foreign markets. If the climate is too cold it will be necessary to provide shelter for the animals for long seasons, and the cost of production of the meat will be increased accordingly, while the expense of winter feeding will add still more. On the other hand, a hot climate has its disadvantages for both the cattle and the stock raisers. Pasture land, to be valuable for stock raising, must be accessible to market. With the improvement of agriculture and the increase in population of a region, land suitable for pasture becomes too expensive for such use, and the stock raiser is compelled to go farther in search of a cattle range or else occupy the high-priced land and produce a grade of meat considerably above the average, thus making the increased selling price of his product balance the rise in value of the land.

Of these three requisites for the production of meat on a large scale for the world's markets perhaps the most important is the economic strength of the producers. Stock raisers must have the capital required to provide the food and care necessary to make good meat animals, and the delivery of the animals in good condition to the places of slaughter requires a highly organized industrial system. Moreover the production of meat of good and uniform quality, and in large quantities, and the arrangements for ocean transportation of both cattle and meat require financial ability on the part of producers.

REGIONS OF SURPLUS.

By far the greater part of the meat imported into Europe comes from three regions. The most important includes that part of the United States east of the Rocky Mountains and that part of the Province of Ontario, Canada, lying east of Lake Huron; the second in importance is situated along the River Plata and lies almost wholly in Argentina; and the third great surplus region is New Zealand and Australia. The leading meat products of the United States and Canada are cured pork, lard, and fresh beef; Argentina supplies fresh beef and fresh mutton; and the leading product of Australasia is frozen mutton.

UNITED STATES, ARGENTINA, AND AUSTRALASIA.

In these regions of surplus meat production the climate is favorable, plenty of good pasture land is available, and the economic condition of the meat producers is of the highest order. The corn crops of the northern part of the Mississippi Valley make possible a surplus of pork products, the magnitude of which is indicated by the exports from the United States, during the fiscal year 1904, of 1,000,000,000 pounds of bacon, hams, and lard. The live cattle from this region of surplus are almost the only foreign cattle imported into the United Kingdom, and the exports of fresh beef from the United States exceed those from any other country.

The frozen-meat industry of Argentina is of recent growth. The production of frozen beef for export dates back perhaps twenty years, but it is only during the past five or six years that the exports of this article have been of much importance. The exports of fresh beef from Argentina in 1903 amounted to 180,000,000 pounds, while New Zealand exported 23,000,000 pounds in the same time, and the exports from the United States during the fiscal year 1903 were 255,000,000 pounds. The surplus fresh mutton of Argentina and Australasia during 1903 amounted to 436,000,000 pounds, of which the latter exported 264,000,000 pounds.

The relative size of the meat surplus in each of these countries appears roughly in the value of live meat animals and packing-house products exported during 1903 (year ending June 30 for the United States and Canada), the latest year for which statistics for all the countries are available. These values were: United States, $210,000,000; Canada, $31,000,000; Argentina, $27,000,000; New Zealand, $19,000,000; and Australia, $11,000,000.

UNITED KINGDOM.

WORLD'S GREATEST MEAT MARKET.

The United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland is not only the greatest industrial but also the greatest meat-eating country of Europe. It is not surprising, therefore, to find that the imports of meat animals, meats, and other packing-house products into the United Kingdom are enormous, reaching the total sum of almost $300,000,000 per annum, and the imports of these products are rapidly growing. The annual average imports during the triennial period 1895-1897 was $216,154,000, and during 1902-1904, $287,653,000, which means an increase of 33 per cent within this short period.

Live meat animals constitute only a small part of these imports, and their imports are even decreasing, especially relative to the increase in the imports of the packing-house products. Thus the average annual imports of live meat animals have decreased from $49,938,000 during 1895-1897 to $45,993,000 in 1902-1904, or 8 per cent, while the imports of packing-house products have increased from $160,859,000 to $232,385,000, or 44.4 per cent, so that live meat animals constitute during the first triennial period 23 per cent and during the last triennial period only 16 per cent of the total value of all articles specified in Table 3.

The decrease was especially marked in the case of sheep, the average number of cattle imported showing a decrease from 532,146 to 497,189, or 7 per cent, and the average number of sheep and lambs a decrease of from 815,522 to 343,228, or 58 per cent, still comparing the two periods 1895-1897 and 1902-1904. During the same time the imports of poultry increased from $3,311,000 to $5,643,000 in value, or 74 per cent, and the imports of dead rabbits from $2,045,000 to $3,632,000, or 78 per cent. These interesting facts indicate a considerable development of sources of animal food supply which were practically unknown a few years ago.

Products of the packing-house.—Of all of the packing-house products the most important articles of imports are fresh and simply prepared meats, such as meats salted and smoked. The average imports of fresh beef have increased from 293,000,000 pounds in 1895-1897 to 456,000,000 pounds during 1902-1904, or 55.6 per cent, while the value has increased from $24,475,000 to $39,467,000, or 61 per cent; the average annual imports of fresh mutton have increased from 325,000,000 pounds to 417,000,000 pounds, or 28 per cent, and the value from $22,941,000 to $35,043,000, or 53 per cent; which seems to indicate a general rise in the price of meats.

Of the simply prepared meats the most important is bacon, the imports of which have increased from 508,000,000 pounds to 586,000,000 pounds, or 15 per cent, the two periods being compared, while the value of these imports has increased from $39,984,000 to $64,689,000, or 62 per cent. The average annual imports of fresh beef, fresh mutton, and bacon amounted during 1902-1904 to $139,199,000, or 60 per cent of the total packing-house products.

Next in importance are hams, beef cured otherwise than by salting, and fresh pork, and the imports of these and all other meats during the last three years amounted annually to $183,537,000, or 79 per cent of all the packing-house products; of the remaining 21 per cent of the packing-house products the greater part is contributed by the animal fats, lard amounting to $18,383,000, or 8 per cent; tallow to $11,268,000, or 5 per cent; and oleomargarin, together with oleo oil, to $13,569,000, or 6 per cent.

FEW LARGE SOURCES OF SUPPLY.

In view of these enormous quantities of imports of meat animals, meats, and other packing-house products, their sources are especially important. In Table 3 are given the main eight contributing countries, which supplied 95.7 per cent in 1895-1897 and 96.6 per cent in 1902-1904, which does not seem to indicate any development of new sources of meat supply for the British nation.

Of the eight countries mentioned, Belgium contributes very little, and the imports from Australia have been continually declining and fell from $19,000,000 to $8,000,000 in the annual averages of the earlier and later periods. Thus the remaining six countries supplied, in 1902-1904, 91.8 per cent of the total value of all the products mentioned in Table 3.

United States contributes half.—While the relative share of the United States has decreased slightly, this country still continues to contribute almost one-half of the total imports, or more than the other seven countries mentioned in Table 3. Proportionately the increased imports from Canada and New Zealand scarcely compensated for the loss of imports from Australia, so that the total imports from these three colonies have declined from 21.2 to 19.6 per cent. The greatest increase is noticed in the imports from Argentina, which have more than doubled within these years.

Altogether the demand of the United Kingdom for live animals and packing-house products has increased by over $70,000,000 during the decade. The last column in Table 1 shows by what countries this additional demand was met, the United States contributing 44 per cent of this, Argentina 20 per cent, and Canada 15 per cent, while the gain of New Zealand just neutralized the loss of Australia.

In the imports of live meat animals, two countries, the United States and Canada, have entirely monopolized the field, contributing within the last three years 97.5 per cent (United States 69.8 per cent and Canada 27.7 per cent), while during 1895-1897 the share of these two countries was only 85 per cent, the small shipments of live cattle and sheep from Argentina and of sheep from Denmark having entirely stopped subsequently.

OTHER COUNTRIES GAINING RELATIVELY.

If the packing-house products alone are considered, the relative gains of Canada, Argentina, and New Zealand appear much greater. Thus, making a comparison between the same triennial periods, as before, it is seen that the share of the United States has remained practically unchanged (48 per cent against 47 per cent), the imports from this country having increased about 40 per cent. During the same period the imports from Canada have more than doubled; the imports from New Zealand have doubled; the imports from Denmark have increased 62 per cent; the imports from Argentina have increased fourfold, and the share of this South American republic in the total imports of packing-house products into the United Kingdom has increased from 4.4 to 11.7 per cent. Thus Argentina is seen to be the most important coming competitor of the United States in the British market.

Fresh beef, bacon, ham, and lard are the most important items of imports from the United States into the United Kingdom, these four articles constituting, during the last three years, 86 per cent of the total imports from the United States. In lard and ham the United States has almost no competitors at all, contributing as it does 92 per cent of the former and 85 per cent of the latter.

In the market for bacon, the Canadian and Danish seem to be somewhat encroaching upon the supply from the United States; thus, the average total imports increased from 508,000,000 pounds in 1895-1897 to 586,000,000 pounds in 1902-1904, and for the same periods the imports from the United States were 336,000,000 pounds and 335,000,000 pounds; from Canada 38,000,000 and 73,000,000 pounds; from Denmark 122,000,000 and 167,000,000 pounds; so that the share of the United States has decreased from 66 to 57 per cent, while the share of Canada has increased from 7.5 to 12.5 per cent, and that of Denmark from 24 to 28.5 per cent.

In the fresh-beef market the American product finds a serious competitor in the recent growth of supply from Argentina, and this competition has developed rather suddenly since 1900. The average annual imports from all countries were, during 1895-1897, 293,000,000 pounds; during 1898-1900, 412,000,000 pounds; during 1901-1903, 462,000,000 pounds; and in 1904, 487,000,000 pounds.

During these periods the United States contributed, respectively, 223,000,000 pounds, or 76 per cent; 296,000,000 pounds, or 72 per cent; 305,000,000 pounds, or 66 per cent; and within the last year 268,000,000 pounds, or 55 per cent. Argentina has furnished, during the same period, 6,000,000 pounds, or 2 per cent; 25,000,000 pounds, or 6 per cent; 106,000,000 pounds, or 23 per cent; and for the year 1904, 188,000,000 pounds, or 39 per cent.

This growth of imports of fresh beef from Argentina is mainly due to the closure of the English ports to Argentine cattle since 1901, with the exception of three months in the spring of 1903.

Mutton market.—No less important is the gain of Argentina in the mutton market, where the South American republic comes into competition with New Zealand and Australia. The imports from Argentina have increased from 91,000,000 pounds in 1895-1897 to 159,000,000 pounds in 1902-1904, or in proportion to the total imports from 28 to 38 per cent, and the imports from New Zealand have increased from 133,000,000 to 198,000,000 pounds, or from 41 to 47 per cent; while the imports from Australia have decreased from 74,000,000 to 23,000,000 pounds, or from 23 to 6 per cent.

A few more facts deserve some emphasis: Practically all the oleomargarin imported comes from the Netherlands, as do two-thirds of the imports of fresh pork. In the imports of tallow, as in the imports of mutton, Argentina and, to a less degree, New Zealand have been substituted for Australia as a source of supply. About the only article the imports of which from Australia have actually increased within the last ten years are dead rabbits. That country at present contributes more than half of the British supply, and New Zealand about one-fourth.

GERMANY.

A RESTRICTIVE MARKET.

Next to the United Kingdom, Germany is the greatest importer of meats and meat products, and, with the growth of German population and its manufacturing industries, the imports of these articles are rapidly growing, notwithstanding the many legal restrictions put in the way. The value of the average annual imports during 1895-1897 were $56,110,600, and during 1902-1904, $89,529,600; or, during that short period they increased 60 per cent.

Increase of live animals.—The value of the imports of live animals has increased but little, if the first year is compared with the last year of the decade in question, but for the purpose of a fair comparison the year 1895 should not be included, for in that year several restrictions were put upon the importation of cattle from Austria-Hungary and swine from Austria-Hungary and Denmark, which greatly decreased the imports in 1896. But since 1896 the increase has been regular and considerable. During 1896-1898 the average imports amounted to $15,200,000, and during 1902-1904 to $28,300,000, which shows an increase of 86 per cent.

The increase in the imports of live animals is due entirely to increased imports of cattle, the legal restrictions keeping the imports of swine and sheep down. Cattle come mainly from Austria-Hungary (72.9 per cent during the years 1902-1904), Denmark (19.8 per cent), and Switzerland (7.2 per cent), and all other countries are represented by less than one-half of 1 per cent, while of all the swine imported but 2.4 per cent come from Russia. No cattle have been admitted into the German Empire from the United States since 1894.

Packing-house products declining.—If the average imports of packing-house products for the first and last three years of the decade be compared, a considerable increase—from $30,482,000 to $49,270,000, or 61.6 per cent—is shown, but during the intermediate years the imports of packing-house products were considerably larger than during the last three years. In fact, since 1902 the imports of packing-house products have rapidly declined, and it seems as if the imports of live animals begin to play a comparatively larger part.

UNITED STATES AND AUSTRIA-HUNGARY LEADING.

The sources of imports of packing-house products are more numerous than those of cattle. While these products are classified in Table 4 in 20 groups, and in the original reports in many more, the greatest part of the imports is limited to a few products only. Thus, in 1897 (the statistics for 1895 and 1896 being so different as hardly to admit of comparison), the imports of lard, tallow, oleomargarin, and sausage casings amounted to 59 per cent, and in 1904 to 80 per cent of the total imports of the packing-house goods. The imports of all kinds of meats have decreased under the influence of various restrictive measures from $9,496,000 in 1897 to $6,275,000 in 1904, or 34 per cent; and in comparison with the total imports of packing-house products, from 27.5 per cent in 1897 to 14.4 per cent in 1904.

The increase in the imports of live cattle was evidently one effort to compensate for this decrease. Another was the increase in the imports of poultry and game, which have more than doubled within the ten years.

Notwithstanding the prohibition of importations of live animals and fresh meats from the United States, this country still supplies a great and growing share of the imports of packing-house products. The share of the United States grew from 56.4 per cent in 1895-1897 to 57.5 per cent in 1902-1904. This large share of American imports is due to a very few articles, namely, lard, oleomargarin, sausage casings, and tallow, the imports of which into Germany in 1902-1904 were equal to 90 per cent of all imports from the United States.

In the case of oleomargarin and oleo oil, the imports from the United States in 1902-1904 constituted 87.7 per cent, and of lard 97.1 per cent, of the total quantity imported.

Next to the United States, Austria-Hungary has the greatest share in the import trade, which increased from 20.8 per cent in 1895-1897 to 30.9 per cent in 1902-1904. Mainly live animals are imported from Austria-Hungary, and of these it contributed 74.5 per cent in 1902-1904.

Of the total poultry and game imported, Austria-Hungary contributed in 1902-1904 a little more than one-third (34.8 per cent). In packing-house products the imports were considerable only in 1901 and 1902, when large quantities of fresh pork were admitted.

THREE GROWING COMPETITORS.

Of the other countries, only Russia, Denmark, and the Netherlands have an important and growing trade with Germany in these products. The imports from Russia have more than doubled within the decade; 55.8 per cent of it consisted in 1902-1904 of poultry and game (mainly live geese), 16.8 per cent live swine, and sausage casings 20 per cent. Russian swine were almost the only ones admitted into Germany during the ten years. The imports from Denmark, which fell off almost one-half from 1895 to 1896, have been increasing slowly since 1901, and consist mainly of cattle (55.2 per cent in 1902-1904), fresh beef (19.4 per cent), and sausage casings. The imports from the Netherlands have gradually increased since 1895, but show a decline since 1903. Fresh pork and fresh beef constitute 62 per cent of the total imports in 1902-1904. Switzerland sends very little except cattle, mainly milch cows.

THE NETHERLANDS.

LARGE REEXPORTS.

Considering its very small population of a little over 5,000,000, the Netherlands imports a very large quantity of meats and other packing-house products, and, as it is to a great extent an agricultural country, the probability suggests itself that an important part of these imports is reexported. It is true that the statistical reports of that country endeavor to separate these two classes of imports, the general imports including the total quantity imported, while the special imports are not intended to include the part destined to be reexported; but the distinction is not always easy to make, especially in case of goods admitted without duty, or goods which must go through a process of manufacture before being reexported.

Table 5, compiled for this Bulletin, gives the data of the special trade, but this statement must not be taken without qualifications. The imports of margarin, raw (mainly oleo oil), may be quoted as an example. The general imports in 1904 amounted to about 108,000,000 pounds, of which 103,000,000 pounds were entered in the special trade or as imports for consumption. One must not suppose that an agricultural country needs for its own consumption an import of more than 20 pounds per capita annually, but oleo oil and oleo-margarin being admitted free the importer has no object in drawing the distinction between the general and special trade carefully.

Forwarded to United Kingdom and Germany.—The final destination of these enormous quantities is found in the statistics of exports, from which it appears that the exports of oleomargarin amounted to nearly 103,000,000 pounds in 1904, of which 95,000,000 pounds went to the United Kingdom; and the exports of oleo oil were 59,000,000 pounds, of which 49,000,000 pounds went to Germany. This indicates that most, if not all, of the oleo oil imported is reexported, partly as oleo oil and partly as manufactured oleomargarin, and goes mainly to the United Kingdom and to Germany. The final destination of the oleo oil imported into the Netherlands is of special interest to the American packer, since nearly 95 per cent of the oleo oil imported into the Netherlands comes from the United States.

The same is true of the imports of lard and tallow. As against the imports of 76,000,000 pounds of lard in 1904, of which 94 per cent came from the United States, there was an export of 56,000,000 pounds, of which 54,000,000 pounds went to Germany; and, as against the imports of about 98,000,000 pounds of tallow, of which more than one-half came from the United Kingdom, there was an export of 78,000,000 pounds, of which 48,000,000 pounds went to Germany and 13,000,000 pounds to Belgium.

It appears, therefore, that the large totals of the imports of the Netherlands are more characteristic of international trade than of the consumption of the Dutch people, and that the large imports from the United States are in reality imports to the United Kingdom and to Germany. The reader is warned, however, against any effort to correct the British or German data, by addition of the Dutch figures, for it is impossible to tell with any degree of certainty whether these goods, imported to the Netherlands and reexported to some other country, have been credited by the latter to the original country of shipment or to the country of last shipment.

Small imports for consumption.—In the light of these facts the actual imports for consumption of the products under discussion appear to be very small. Of the average imports of all specified articles of Table 5, which amounted to $26,625,000 in 1902–1904, three articles, namely, oleo oil (olemargarin, raw), lard, and tallow, amounted to $18,250,000, or 68.5 per cent, and with the addition of two more articles, hair and sausage casings, the total is $24,544,000, or 92 per cent.

SHARE OF THE UNITED STATES.

The share of the United States in the imports of the specified articles of Table 5 has increased from $11,371,000 in 1895–1897 to $14,303,000 in 1902–1904, or, in proportion to the total imports, from 51.3 per cent to 53.7 per cent. The United Kingdom contributed during the last three years, annually, $4,668,000, or 17.5 per cent; and Germany $4,222,000, or 15.8 per cent; the three named countries have therefore contributed 87 per cent, or nearly seven-eighths of the total.

The nature of the imports from the United States has been indicated above. Lard and oleo oil constituted during the last three years 79.1 per cent of the total imports from this country. Tallow and sausage casings made up 86.6 per cent of the imports from the United Kingdom. Of the imports from Germany 65 per cent consisted of animal hair.

FRANCE.

PECULIARITIES OF REPORTS.

Because of the peculiarities of the French statistical reports of foreign trade, it is impossible to present the data relating to France according to the plan which is employed for all other countries. The main difficulty was found in the fact that the tables of the French reports by articles and countries give only the principal countries for each particular article, and throw all the other countries together under "All other."

For the sake of economy in space the plan has been followed throughout the bulletin of somewhat simplifying the table by combining various similar articles, which are stated separately in the original reports, perhaps for considerations of customs policy. Thus, the numerous classes of cattle, in some countries six or seven, have been combined into one; so have been the various classes of swine and poultry and game. These combinations were made in the lines showing total imports to France. But in the lines giving imports to France from individual countries, it was often found impossible to make such combinations. To use a concrete example, if one tries to obtain a complete statement of imports of cattle from Algeria, he finds in 1897 the number of oxen, cows, bulls, heifers, and calves stated, but not of steers and bullocks; on the other hand, for 1896 there are the data for the steers and bullocks, but not for heifers and calves. There may have been no imports of these articles, but there is no way of coming to a positive conclusion from the printed reports on hand; it is therefore impossible to give a complete statement of imports of cattle from Algeria to France.

Finally, it must be mentioned that the detailed statistics do not give the value of the imports of individual articles from each country, even when they give the quantity, and in the statement of imports from individual countries, the quantity and the value of only a few articles are given. But as the original tables state the average values of all articles, it was possible to compute the value in each case where the quantity was given. It was found, however, that in a few cases the value as thus computed differed from the value as given. In these cases, for purposes of uniformity and consistency, the computed value was used.

DECLINE OF IMPORTS.

The total imports of animals and packing-house products into France have decreased by more than one-half during the last ten years, the total value in 1904 being equal to only 49.6 per cent of the total value in 1895. The strongest declines have taken place in 1896 and 1904, the decline in the former year being equal to 30 per cent of the value of the imports of the preceding year and in the latter year to 25 per cent.

These sudden decreases were due in both cases to legislative causes; in 1896 a number of regulations were passed introducing stricter sanitary examination, limiting the ports of entry of live meat animals, and introducing a special sanitary duty, while in 1903 the tariff on meat animals as well as most packing-house products was almost doubled. The regulations of 1896 mainly applied to live animals, and the increases of the customs duties in 1903 were much greater in the case of live animals than in the case of packing-house products. It is therefore natural to find that the greater decline in imports is noticed in the live animals. Thus, in 1896 the imports of live animals decreased 48.3 per cent, and those of the packing-house products only 9 per cent, and in 1904 the imports of live animals decreased 37.4 per cent, while packing-house products showed a decrease of only 19.3 per cent, the percentages of decrease for the entire decade being 67.6 and 37, respectively; so that the value of live animals imported constituted, in 1895, 54.5 per cent, and in 1904, 35.6 per cent of the total value of meat animals and packing-house products. This decrease is especially perceptible in the imports of swine, which in 1904 amounted to 7.7 per cent of the imports in 1895, those of the cattle to 15.7 per cent, and those of the sheep and goats to 65.1 per cent.

Of the packing-house products the meats and other provisions were especially affected. The value of meats imported decreased 70 per cent, the imports of lard decreased 82 per cent, and those of oleomargarin, because of the prohibition of importing it under the name of butter, even 96 per cent, while the imports of the packing-house products not used for food have even increased 18.7 per cent. In 1895 these products constituted only 32.3 per cent of the total value of the packing-house products, and in 1904, 60.9 per cent. In the latter year the main articles of importation of this class were bones, hoofs and horns, and tallow. Salted pork and tallow are the only packing-house products the imports of which still exceed $1,000,000.

LIVE-ANIMAL SUPPLY.

While small quantities of live animals are shipped to France from many European countries, chiefly Spain, Italy, and the United Kingdom, most of the live animals imported come from Algeria, which, as a French colony, has a preferential tariff rate; and in 1902-1904 the Algerian cattle equaled 57.1 per cent of the total cattle imported, and the Algerian sheep 88.3 per cent of all the sheep imported. The importation of packing-house products into France from Algeria is insignificant.

At the beginning of the decade under consideration Spain was shipping large quantities of cattle, sheep, and swine to France, but under the influence of the causes indicated above the imports of cattle and sheep have greatly decreased, and the imports of swine practically stopped altogether. The imports of packing-house products from Spain are also very small indeed. Italy continues sending about 4,000,000 pounds of poultry and game; sausage is another comparatively important item of import from Italy, but the quantity imported has declined from over 1,419,000 pounds in 1895 to 502,000 in 1904.

REIMPORTED PACKING-HOUSE PRODUCTS.

Though the United Kingdom also has suffered from the restrictive policy of France, it still remains one of the main sources of supply for many packing-house products. Thus it contributed in 1902-1904 60 per cent of the fats imported into France, and 52.8 per cent of the pork and hams. Ten years ago Germany shipped to France large numbers of sheep, but these shipments became smaller from year to year, until in 1904 they were too small to be specially stated. Germany still sends some salt pork and ham (about 1,842,000 pounds annually during the last three years) and some poultry and game. Belgium sends a great variety of packing-house products in small quantities, and also large quantities of poultry and game. The imports of fresh pork, which in 1899 and 1900 amounted to more than 10,000,000 pounds, were reduced to less than a quarter of a million pounds in 1904.

Argentina has lost a growing trade in live animals and fresh meats, of which the imports have practically stopped; some tallow is still brought from Argentina to France, but from an average of 18,683,000 pounds in 1895-1897, the quantity has declined to an average of 5,581,000 pounds in 1902-1904.

No live animals and fresh meats are admitted to France from the United States. Tallow, lard and fats, salted pork and hams, and sausage are the main packing-house products shipped to France from this country. But the imports of both lard and salted pork have fallen off during the last four or five years. Naturally the French market seems to have a great potential importance for American packing-house products, but is mostly closed to them by various legislative restrictions.

BELGIUM.

UNDER LEGISLATIVE RESTRICTIONS.

The imports of live animals and packing-house products into Belgium have increased from an average of $14,455,000 in 1895-1897 to an average of $16,487,000 in 1902-1904, or 14.1 per cent. The average imports of live animals have increased from $4,922,000 to $5,851,000, or 18.1 per cent, and the imports of the packing-house products from $9,029,000 to $10,157,000, or 12.5 per cent. This small increase for an entire decade is partly due to legislative measures, as the introduction of a duty of about 1.7 cents on a pound on oleomargarin and the sanitary inspection of fresh meat in 1895. As a result the imports of fresh beef fell from 1895 to 1896 by 96 per cent and the imports of oleomargarin by 95 per cent, and the value of the imports of all the packing-house products fell by almost one-third. Though since 1896 the imports have been steadily growing, they had not reached those of 1895 by 1904.

NINE-TENTHS FROM SIX COUNTRIES.

The greatest share of the imports comes from the immediate neighbor of Belgium, the Netherlands, and the imports from that country amounted in 1902-1904 to $6,090,000, or 37 per cent of the total. Next to the Netherlands the most important country of supply is the United States, and the total value of the articles imported from this country, specified in Table 7, has increased from $4,987,000 in 1895-1897 to $5,708,000 in 1902-1904, which is equal to 34.6 per cent of the value of all articles specified imported from all countries. From all other countries were imported during 1904 less than $1,000,000 each, the four countries named besides the Netherlands and the United States in Table 7 contributing 20.2 per cent in 1902-1904, or only three-fifths of the imports from the United States. Altogether the six countries named in Table 7 sent 91.8 per cent of all articles of the table to Belgium.

STATISTICAL DIFFICULTIES WITH VALUES.

It must be pointed out that the total values stated in Table 7 for various countries are all too low because of certain peculiarities of the Belgian foreign-trade statistics. The imports of individual items from all countries are not stated separately, but the main sources of each article are indicated and all the other countries grouped together as "All other countries." The numerous blanks found in the table of imports into Belgium are therefore not to be interpreted as meaning that there were no imports of the specified articles from the country in question, but that the quantity imported from the particular country can not be determined. The values of these importations were necessarily left out in computing the total value of the imports of all items from the particular country.

IMPORTANCE OF THE BELGIAN MARKET.

The importance of the Belgian market for American packing-house products is made much more evident when the imports of individual articles are examined. In the imports of live meat animals the Netherlands holds a commanding position. Of the total imports of live animals during the last three years mentioned cattle constitute about 82 per cent and sheep 18 per cent, the imports of swine, because of sanitary regulations, being very insignificant.

In the beginning of the decade under discussion considerable quantities of cattle and sheep came from the United States and Argentina, but sanitary regulations have cut off the supply from these countries, so that in 1899–1902 more than 98 per cent of the cattle came from the Netherlands, and only during the last two years has the importation of cattle from the United States been reestablished. Live sheep come from both the Netherlands and Germany, the share of the former constantly growing. In 1895–1897 28.4 per cent of all sheep and in 1902–1904 49.2 per cent came from the Netherlands.

PREDOMINANCE OF PACKING-HOUSE PRODUCTS.

In the imports of packing-house products the first place belongs to the United States, more than 49 per cent having come from this country in 1902–1904, while the Netherlands contributed only 13.1 per cent, the United Kingdom 9.5 per cent, and France 9.6 per cent.

With the rigid inspection of fresh meats their importation is very small, and the packing-house products imported consist in the main of two classes of goods: fats and oils, namely, lard, oleo oil, and fats n. e. s.; and cured meats. The value of the imports of the first group of products in 1902–1904 was $6,645,000, or 65.4 per cent of the total value of the packing-house products imported, and the value of the second group was $2,873,000, or 28.3 per cent.

During the same triennial period the United States contributed 90 per cent of the quantity of lard imported, 22 per cent of the other fats and 20 per cent of the oleo oil. Of the fats other than lard large quantities came from France, the United Kingdom, and the Netherlands, namely, 24.7 per cent, 20.1 per cent, and 7.6 per cent, in the order named. Of the oleo oil 69.2 per cent came from the Netherlands and 10.1 per cent from France during the last three years.

SWITZERLAND.

LARGE PER CAPITA CONSUMPTION.

For a country with a population of only about three and one-half millions, Switzerland imports a very large quantity of live animals and packing-house products. The average value of these imports has increased from $12,888,000 in 1895-1897 to $15,223,000 in 1902-1904, or 18 per cent.

Tourists as consumers.—It is probable that this large consumption of imported meats in what is essentially an agricultural country is explained by the large number of prosperous foreigners who spend the summer in Switzerland. The number of guests who stopped in Swiss hotels during 1897 was 2,300,000; during 1899, 2,559,000. The number of days spent in hotels and boarding houses was about 10,000,000. The actual number of tourists visiting Switzerland can not be determined, but is estimated in the Annuaire Statistique de la Suisse for 1901 (p. 95) at 300,000 to 400,000.

PREDOMINANCE OF MEAT ANIMALS.

Live meat animals are imported in a much greater quantity than packing-house products, the former being valued in 1902-1904 at $9,826,000, or 64.5 per cent; of the live animals cattle were most important. The imports of cattle during the last three years equaled almost one-half of the total imports of all articles specified in Table 8. Of the packing-house products, two-thirds consist of meats, such as fresh meat, salted and smoked meat, and sausages.

Supply mostly from neighboring countries.—The articles imported being mainly live animals, or meats raw or simply prepared, the trade is naturally limited to the neighboring countries. Thus in 1902-1904 France contributed 34.7 per cent of the value of all the specified articles, Italy 32.9 per cent, Germany 13.6 per cent, and Austria-Hungary 12.1 per cent. These four countries directly border on Switzerland and send together 93.3 per cent of the total imports of the articles specified.

The United States is the only distant country which contributed a perceptible, if not a very large, share of these imports, but the average imports from this country have decreased from $918,000 in 1895-1897 to $659,000 in 1902-1904, or from 7.1 to 4.3 per cent. As no live animals from this country reach Switzerland it is perhaps preferable to take the proportion of the imports from this country to the total value of packing-house products only, and then the proportion is found to have been 35.0 per cent in the first period and only 17.4 per cent in the latter period. The only two articles the imports of which from this country to Switzerland are of importance are lard, and meat, salted, smoked, etc., which amounted to 87.0 per cent of the total imports of all packing-house products from this country.

AUSTRIA-HUNGARY.*AUSTRIA SERVED BY HUNGARY.

The union of the industrial Austria with agricultural Hungary provides the former with a sufficient source of supply of farm products, and the latter with a market for the same. Under these circumstances the imports of live animals and of packing-house products into these combined countries is not very great. During 1895-1897 the average annual imports of the items specified in Table 9 equaled $9,054,000, and $12,736,000 during 1902-1904, an increase of 40 per cent. Of this total live animals constituted more than half, namely, $4,701,000, or 52 per cent. during the first period, and $7,602,000, or 60 per cent, during the last three years.

SERVIA PREFERRED.

Of the live meat animals, only a few sheep were imported, but considerable quantities of cattle and swine, both mainly from Servia, with which country Austria-Hungary has a treaty,<sup>a</sup> giving Servia special rates, which are not extended to the other countries having the most-favored-nation clause in their treaties with Austria-Hungary. Thus the average annual value of cattle and swine imported into Austria-Hungary from Servia during 1902-1904 was $7,066,000, or 92.9 per cent of the total imports of live meat animals into Austria-Hungary, or 55 per cent of the total imports of the items of Table 9.

LARD, AND SAUSAGE CASINGS.

The imports of packing-house products amount to less than $4,000,000 a year. Lard and sausage casings amounted during the last year to more than $1,000,000 each. Almost all the lard comes from the United States: and Germany, Russia, and the United States send sausage casings.

DECLINE AND REVIVAL OF THE UNITED STATES.

The imports from the United States consist mainly of lard and much smaller quantities of tallow and bacon. The imports of these products went through a noticeable fluctuation during the decade under consideration; the imports were increasing rapidly from 1895 to 1898, after which there started an equally rapid decline which brought the imports in 1902 down to a low figure, and the imports of bacon, lard, and tallow have practically vanished.

In 1903 a reaction started in most of the articles, though in 1904 the total value of the imports of the packing-house products was still considerably below that in 1897-1899.

CUBA.

SUPPLY CHIEFLY FROM UNITED STATES.

Statistics of the foreign trade of Cuba are available only since July 1, 1899; that is, some time after the occupation of the island by the army of the United States. Statistics were published by the War Department until May 19, 1902, and these were continued by Cuba, with only minor changes of method. The fiscal year ending June 30 has been used.

Considering the small population of the island the imports of meat animals, meats, and packing-house products into Cuba are very large. They have been especially large during the first year for which there are any records, that of 1899-1900, when they were valued at $19,600,000, but the total value of the imports of these goods has gradually decreased since then, falling to less than $12,000,000 in 1902-1903, after which the current changed again to an increase.

The causes of these changes are evidently to be sought in the occupation by the United States, which kept up a demand for meats to supply its army, and this demand gradually decreased with the size of the army. The normal demand of the Cuban population and its possible growth may be judged only from the data of the last two years.

UNDER NORMAL CONDITIONS.

The total sum of imports is fairly equally divided between live animals and packing-house products, and the same rule obtains, notwithstanding the decline of the imports. The imports of live animals consist almost exclusively of cattle, the considerable imports of swine having practically stopped since the evacuation of the island by the Army of the United States.

Few articles and cheaper grades.—Of the packing-house products imported into Cuba the largest share is contributed by a few articles of the cheaper grades. In the year 1903-1904 lard of a cheap grade (to judge from the low average price, about 6 or 7 cents) constituted 43.6 per cent of the total packing-house products, and jerked beef, probably the cheapest beef on the market, 29.7 per cent; the imports of hams and salted pork amounted to 17.5 per cent for the same year, leaving only 9.2 per cent for all the other packing-house products. Considerable imports of fresh and prepared beef and poultry are recorded for the earlier years, but these have fallen off since the evacuation of the American troops.

Though the amount imported from the United States has fallen, its proportionate share in the imports has increased from 46.4 in 1899-1900 to 47.6 per cent in 1903-1904, while the imports from Argentina, Colombia, Honduras, Mexico, and Porto Rico have considerably decreased.

The share of the United States in the imports of live animals is much smaller than in the imports of packing-house products, being 28.9 per cent against 67 per cent in 1903-1904 for the latter. While large numbers of cattle are imported from Colombia, Mexico, Venezuela, and Honduras, the only packing-house product which is imported from other countries to any extent is jerked beef, 90.9 per cent of which in 1903-1904 came from Uruguay, and 8.9 per cent from Argentina. Outside of this article the United States contributed in 1903-1904 over 95 per cent of the packing-house products imported into Cuba.

<sup>a</sup> Not separately stated.<sup>b</sup> Includes poultry, game, canned beef and pork, and "Dairy products, n. e. s." (mainly condensed milk).<sup>c</sup> Included in "Beef, fresh."<sup>d</sup> Includes butter. Statistics of subsequent years seem to indicate that less than half of the quantity (about five-ninths of value) was butter.<sup>e</sup> Not stated separately. Probably included in "Meat, salted and pickled" (given in this table under "Beef, jerked").

DENMARK.

OLEO OIL AND OLEOMARGARIN.

Some explanations of a technical nature are necessary for a proper understanding of the table of imports to Denmark. Like many other European countries, the statistical reports of Denmark distinguish between the general and the special trade, the special imports being those which are entered for consumption. But, unlike most other countries, the table of imports by articles and countries contains the data of the general and not the special trade, and no such statement of imports for consumption by contributing countries can be obtained. It was thought best, therefore, to give the data both of the special and the general trade in Table 11, the first showing the imports for consumption and the latter, together with the statement of the imports from the various countries, giving some idea of the general sources of these imports. As the sum of general imports of all the items mentioned during the last three years exceeded the special imports by more than 50 per cent, and this difference is rapidly growing (in 1895-1897 it was only 33 per cent), the value of the data can be only an approximate one.

The value of the quantities imported from various countries is given only in the cases when the quantity is comparatively large. An examination of Table 11 will show how rarely the values have been stated. It was therefore impossible to ascertain the total value of imports from the separate countries.

For several years the data in the original reports have been rounded to hundreds of pounds and hundreds or thousands of kronen. This rounding was most frequent during the years 1899-1902. During the last year, 1903, the values of the special trade have been rounded but not of the general trade. In general, values have been rounded more frequently than quantities, and both large quantities and values more frequently than small ones. In converting the original figures to United States denominations, the rule was to follow the original tables as to the rounding of the figures.

LARGE REEXPORT FEATURES.

The total imports in the special trade have increased from an average of $3,278,000 in 1895-1897 to $6,359,000 in 1902-1904; that is, they have almost doubled. Only a very small proportion of these imports consisted of live animals—in the last three years only 3.7 per cent. Of the packing-house products, the fats, raw and manufactured, as in the form of oleo oil and oleomargarin, were the main articles imported, the imports of these three articles constituting in 1895-1897 53.7 per cent and in 1902-1904 66.7 per cent of the imports of the total packing-house products. The difference between the general and special trade, which amounted on an average during the last three years to $3,366,000, is made up mainly of the following articles: Pork and ham, salted, fats, n. e. s. (mainly lard), stearin, and oleo oil, all being articles of which large quantities are imported from the United States to be reexported again to other countries.

For reasons indicated above, it is impossible to compute the total value of imports from separate countries. It appears that large quantities of fats (lard), oleo oil, salted beef, salted pork, stearin, etc., are brought in from the United States, but the largest part of these is reexported. The live animals imported seem to be destined for the home market, and all come from Sweden. The same is true of the small imports of fresh beef. On the other hand, prepared beef comes mainly from the United States, and a considerable part of it is reexported. The same is true of lard and oleo oil. On the other hand, of the finished product of oleomargarin, about two-thirds come from the Netherlands; the figures for the imports from the Netherlands are not shown in Table 11, and, most probably, this Dutch oleomargarin is made of American oleo oil. In the imports of large quantities of cured pork, hams, etc., Sweden shares equally with the United States, but of this quantity more than five-sixths are reexported.

SPAIN.

MARKET FOR PORTUGAL AND FRANCE.

The imports of live animals and packing-house products into Spain remained about the same during the last decade. The average imports during 1895-1897 were $8,535,000 and during 1902-1904, $8,436,000. In one year only did they rise above $10,000,000, because of the very high importation of fertilizers during that year.

The imports of live animals have been gradually increasing, from $2,424,000 in 1895-1897 to $3,208,000 in 1902-1904, an increase of 32.3 per cent in these imports. During the last three years 37.6 per cent were sheep and goats, 39.2 per cent cattle, and 23.2 per cent swine.

The imports of packing-house products have decreased from $5,157,000 in 1895-1897 to $4,553,000 in 1902-1904, or 11.7 per cent. As was indicated above, this decline in the imports of packing-house products is due to the fall in the imports of fertilizers. The fertilizer industry having considerably developed in Spain, the home product has crowded out the imported article.

Animal fats, fertilizers, and sausage casings are the main three packing-house products imported into Spain. In 1895-1897 these three articles constituted 90.8 per cent of the packing-house imports, and in 1902-1904, 88.3 per cent, because of the decline in the imports of the fertilizers. The imports of all other packing-house products are insignificant.

The neighbors of Spain—Portugal and France—seem to command the Spanish market. The imports of meat animals and packing-house products from Portugal increased from $2,586,000 in 1895-1897 to $3,044,000 in 1902-1904, or from 30.3 to 36.1 per cent of the total for all countries. The share of France, on the contrary, declined from 27.2 to 16.7 per cent, and that of the United Kingdom from 13.8 to 5.7 per cent, the decline in both cases being due to the fertilizers.

ARGENTINA AND THE UNITED STATES.

On the other hand, the non-European sources of supply seem to have become more important. The imports from Argentina have increased from $602,000, or 7 per cent of the total in 1895-1897, to $1,606,000, or 19 per cent, in 1902-1904. The imports from the United States increased from $173,000, or 2 per cent, to $418,000, or 5 per cent, the imports from this country being much smaller than those from Argentina and not showing the same tendency to increase.

Live animals are brought in mainly from Portugal, which contributed 78.8 per cent of the total imports in 1902-1904. In the imports of packing-house products alone Argentina occupies the most important place, having contributed 34.6 per cent in 1902-1904. The main imports from Argentina are animal fats, 53.2 per cent having come from that country during the last three years. From France come animal fats and fertilizers, and the same articles make up the bulk of packing-house products from the United Kingdom.

The main packing-house product imported from the United States into Spain is sausage casings, which constitute about 87.7 per cent of the total value of the imports from the United States of all articles specified in Table 12. Considerable quantities of salt pork, bacon, and ham were shipped from the United States to Spain during 1897-1901, but the imports dwindled by more than one-half during the last three years.

ITALY.

IMPORTS MOSTLY FATS AND BACON.

The total imports of meat animals and packing-house products into Italy are not very large, which is easily explained by the habits of the population. The value of these imports has increased from an average of $4,200,000 during the years 1895-1897 to $5,900,000 in 1902-1904. The live meat animals constitute only a small part of these imports, having decreased from an average of $1,000,000 in 1895-1897 to an average of $900,000 in 1902-1904, while the imports of packing-house products have increased from $3,180,000 to $4,880,000, or 53 per cent. Of the packing-house imports only a very small part consisted of meats in any form; lard and all other fats and the fatty acids, like stearin, etc., constituted, during the last three years, 66 per cent of these imports, and if bacon be added to the three classes of goods enumerated, 79 per cent.

United States and Argentina chief sources.—The countries indicated in Table 13 contributed about 90 per cent of the total, but the main sources of import are the two American countries, which seem to compete in some European markets—the United States and Argentina. For the last three years their shares have been about equal in Italy, and together they contributed 42 per cent of the total imports and 52 per cent of the imports of the packing-house products. The United Kingdom sends mainly fats, France mainly fats and fatty acids, Switzerland live cattle, and from Belgium comes one article, meat extract.

PLACE OCCUPIED BY THE UNITED STATES.

NEARLY EQUAL TO ALL OTHER COUNTRIES.

Among the chief countries contributing live meat animals and packing-house products to eleven<sup>a</sup> principal importing countries of Europe and to Cuba, the United States has a comparative standing that varies from 56.75 per cent of the total imports of such animals and products and poultry, etc., into the Netherlands to 2.56 per cent of such imports into Russia. Details for each class of commodities and each country are in Table 14.
